GREAT RICHES IN GOLDEN SCEPTRE

For some days considerable interest has been manifest in the doings of the Golden Sceptre at Rhyolite. It has been known that the management has been expecting great things from the new tunnel which was driven to cut the Hobo vein only a short distance from the workings on the Tramps property. A few days ago this tunnel entered the vein and, according to the latest reports, was in some thirty feet and had not reached the opposite wall, where it carried the big values in the Tramps property.

Nearly everybody interested in the property was watching the daily development and about the time it was expected the rich ore would be encountered the work was stopped. One may hear various reports regarding this move, but as the management has made public no explanation the definite cause is unknown. Reports in circulation, said to have started with the men working on the property, are to the effect that a wide streak of high grade has been tapped, while others say that in addition to this the whole thirty feet of ore runs better than $25 per ton.—Goldfield Review.

PLAIN AND SIMPLE.

A member of the Cleveland bar tells of a country justice in Ohio who was fond of enjoining upon every one in court the necessity of brevity in offering testimony in ordinary suits. On one occasion this worthy successor of Dogberry was admonishing an old man who appeared as a witness in a trifling case.

"You must not, sir," observed the justice in his most solemn manner, "use so many words. Do you understand?"

"I do, your honor."

"Then you must, in the fewest words of which you are capable, answer the plain and simple question whether, when you were crossing the street with the child in your arms, and the carriage was coming down on the right side and the truck on the left, and the express wagon was trying to pass the carriage, you saw the plaintiff between the truck and the express wagon, or whether and when you saw him at all, and whether or not near the carriage, truck and carriage, or either, or any two, and which of them respectively, or how it was."—Harper's Weekly.

GREAT RECEPTION TO A GREAT MAN

WORTHY PRESIDENT THEODORE A. BELL OF THE EAGLES ENTERTAINED.

Grand Worthy President Theodore A. Bell, the biggest Eagle of them all, has come and gone. He was accorded a royal reception as was becoming a royal good fellow; he was more than favorably impressed, and made more than a favorable impression. Mr. Bell arrived here on Sunday morning, and there was an immediate request for his presence in Goldfield. He had to go, there was nothing else to do; and a committee escorted him across the desert in an automobile. He described how he went, upon his return.

Returning to Tonopah shortly after 7 o'clock, he was in plenty time for the parade which escorted him to the Eagles' Pavilion, where a great reception awaited him. His appearance upon the stage was the signal for an ovation from the big crowd which had gathered to greet him. Charles Cameron, worthy president of the Tonopah aerle, presided at the meeting, and P. A. McCarran acted as master of ceremonies. There was music by the band, there was vocal music, and the introduction of Mr. Bell was the signal for a renewed outbreak of applause.

The grand worthy president has a commanding appearance, and the talk he made was what might be expected from such a lofty figure. He spoke of the good that was accomplished by fraternal orders, and also of the bad that crept into those orders. The spirit of the Eagles, he said, was the uplifting of humanity, and the Eagles were always ready to extend a helping hand to those who might be climbing out of the darkness.

"When you see a man who has fallen," said Mr. Bell, "and he is trying to creep up again to the light, extend to him a helping hand; do not refuse him your aid. That is the keynote to the fraternal orders, and they are made for the common people. They do not touch those who are high and well established in life. The man who has a big income and an automobile, who is living in comfort or luxury has no use for the fraternal order, for he can take care of himself without assistance. But it is to those who are not so favored that such orders as the Eagles appeal. We do not bar a man who sometimes takes too much, while we stand for sobriety; because if we did, it might happen at times that we would not get a quorum.

"I have more respect for the criminal who rests in the cells of your jail tonight, no matter for what crime, than for the man or woman of intelligence, no matter what station he or she might occupy, who attempts to blacken the character of a fellow man or woman. That is worse than any crime, the assassination of character and it is one thing for which the Eagles do not stand.

"We may have got in wrong in some cases; we cannot always pick our company, but we can remedy the matter by the weeding out process. There were two Irishmen who were going on a trip, and there was a train of Pullmans made up for the trip; so that they were compelled to take a berth. Toward sundown, one of them says: 'Clancy, I think we have been buncoed.' 'How's that?' says Clancy. 'Why, they charged us five dollars for a bed, and I don't see no bed.' 'Well, be aisy now,' says Clancy, 'and give them a chance.' Bye and bye the porter came along, and desired to know if they wanted their berths made up. 'What's that?' demanded Clancy's friend. 'Do you want your berths, your beds made up?' 'Sure,' says Clancy, 'bring in the beds.' So they were moved out of their seats, while the berths were made up, and never a word was said until the porter had gone. 'Whisper,' says Clancy's friend; 'who's going upstairs?' Well, they matched for it, and Clancy had to take the upper berth. 'Ah right,' says he, 'give me a leg up,' and he went to bed. Soon he heard a terrible racket in the berth below; there were some strange words floated up to him, there was a bump and a crash of glass, and Clancy cried down to his friend:

"Cut out that noise for the love of heaven; they'll throw us off the train. What's the matter with you? And the answer came back: 'How the blazes is a man supposed to get his pants off when he is sitting on them?' 'Stand on the back of your neck and shake them off, you fool,' says Clancy. "That was just a matter of getting in wrong," said the speaker, "and it has been that way with the Eagles in some respects; but there is always a way to right those things. There are parasites on the order which must be shaken off."

Apropos of the sort of people that were in the order, in contradistinction to the high and mighty, Mr. Bell told a good story of an Irish policeman in the depot at Omaha, where a train of Pullmans had just come in. A man getting off the train, stepped briskly off, grip in hand, and with something important on his mind. He stopped when he came to the policeman, and said to him:

"Say, there is the finest train that ever went out on wheels." "Is that so?" said the policeman; "what's so fine about it?" "Why," said the traveler, "the cars are all Pullman, fitted up with all that comfort and luxury can suggest, and I have been all through the train, and every man aboard is a Republican." The Irish policeman looked at him in sympathy, as a physician might look at a harmless lunatic, and said softly: "Say, sonny, just stand over there for ten minutes, and see the gravel train come in."

The inference was that they were not looking for Pullmans from which to recruit the forces of the Eagles, but were taking them from the train on which rode the common people. In apologizing for his failure to reach here Saturday, Mr. Bell said that somebody had got up his itinerary, and he found himself in Reno in the afternoon, with the only way of reaching Tonopah being on foot, and as he was tired he did not attempt to walk. In describing his trip to Goldfield, he said that there were nine of them went and that they were in the hands of the chauffeur. And the chauffeur, he said, was the best he had ever traveled behind. They went at the rate of forty miles an hour, and if they had ever struck a rock, he said, he couldn't help thinking what might have happened, but they all had faith in the man who was guiding them. And that reminded him of a story, where an automobile was going so fast that when it hit a rock or some obstruction, the men went flying out. And as they were going through the air, one of the passengers said to one of the more timid ones: "Don't be afraid, brother; have faith, the Lord is with us."

"Well, if he is," replied the other, "he is certainly going some." Faith, said Mr. Bell, was one of the cardinal principles of the order of the Eagles; faith in humanity. None were sunk so low in the social scale, who was not worth the trial of taking him by the hand and lifting him up toward the light.

Mr. Burrows followed the speaker in the rendition of two most delightful ballads, and he, in turn, was followed by a selection by Mr. Harry Downs, both of which vocal efforts pleased the house immensely. Then, Mr. McCarran, in a few well chosen words, dismissed the big audience, thanking them prettily for their attendance and attention.

BANQUET AT RICHELIEU.

Head of Order Gives Heart to Heart Talk.

Immediately after the speaking the Eagles adjourned to the Richelleu grill, where one of the most elegant repasts ever served in Tonopah awaited them. A congenial, jovial crowd gathered around the banquet table, where, amid the flights of brilliant oratory of various members of the fraternity, intermingled with songs, proved the affair a huge success.

Pat McCarran did proud the honors of toastmaster and was eloquent to a degree worthy of a silver-tongued native of Nevada. Charles Cameron was there with his speech as an Eagle, followed by Ed. Malley, who, with a few witty remarks, tendered the keys of the city (and jail) to the Eagles for the night. Sheriff Owens followed the chief and also tendered the keys of the county to the chief's keys should get lost. Puddy Grimes offered to record the sheriff's remarks remitting the usual fee. A. W. Briggs recited several selections from Bill de Vere, the tramp poet, and was encored to the echo.

Other interesting speeches were made by Con Ahern, deputy worthy president, who declared that he had the time of his life, and everybody said that he was a jolly good fellow; W. A. Sawle, Dr. E. K. Smith, Chas. Kielhofer, W. H. Bryson, Bob Prouty, Hugh Brown and others. Mr. Brown, although not an Eagle, spoke eloquently on the sisterhood of Nevada and California, preminent in the progress of the great West.

Theodore Bell was the last speaker of the evening, and he went into the matter of the undesirable element in the order. This was a heart to heart talk with the Eagles, and he said that the Eagles owed it to themselves to maintain a high order of social standing and to cut off the parasites who were using them for their own purposes. He congratulated the order upon its standing, and told those present how pleased he had been with his visit to Tonopah and Goldfield, and that he hoped some day to come again. The banquet was a great success. It was one of the finest spreads ever witnessed in Tonopah, and it was only overshadowed by the feast of wit and literary excellence that accompanied it.

Mr. Bell left yesterday morning for his home in California.

MINING ENGINEER AT GOLD CIRCLE

"It is my opinion that the Gold Circle district, located north of Winnemucca, will eventually become a big producing camp," said D. H. Skeea, the well known mining engineer from Mazuma, to a Tribune man yesterday. "No great amount of development work has been done as yet, but the surface showings and formation are ideal indications and when the ledges are opened at depth an abundance of shipping ore should be found."

Mr. Skeea has just returned from Gold Circle and Golconda, where he has been examining properties for Oakland, Cal., and Eastern capitalists, and in giving a report of his trip said that Gold Circle was surely in line for a coming producer.

"A peculiarity of the Gold Circle district," continued Mr. Skeea, "is the large quantities of gold found in the soil. From numerous pannings taken from all over the district, the showing is great and it is believed that not only will the ledges be rich and productive, but that a vast amount of gold will be taken out of the placer beds. The gold is very fine, but the pannings are among the richest I have ever seen."

In speaking of the ledges, Mr. Skeea said that they were not very large, varying from five to sixteen inches in width, but were well defined and showed permanency. The veins at the surface are purely silicious and the ore is free milling. The values run all the way from $30 to several hundred, and owing to the abundant supply of water in the district, the values can be extracted at a small cost, thereby doing away with the haul to the railroad.

PROSPECTOR HAS A BIG SURPRISE

J. A. Tibbet and Fred Lazone of this place, who, for some months past, have had a grub-staker out in the region a few miles north of Eldorado Canyon and on the Arizona side, this week received from the same party a small bag of specimen gold rock, with advice that it represented new locations and also that a larger quantity would soon follow. The ore was from the surface, as claimed, and plainly from one to two-inch stringers. It was very handsome and indicated surprisingly rich ground.

These gentlemen also received another surprise in the same connection and quite without precedent. Their field partner had no use for more funds at this time or for some time to come. He explained that in the course of tramping about in the back country he had found an old abandoned stamp mill, that was so ancient that nobody appeared to have any knowledge of it. The owners or workers had left it in such haste that they had not cleaned the mill plates. He, forthwith, made a clean-up, took the bag of amalgam to Chloride, where he cancelled his obligations and laid in a fresh stock of supplies. He did not explain how much was left after all this dissipation, but, evidently, had not yet cashed in the plates. As is well known, these, in an old mill, are of considerable value.

All suggests another hint of romance of the old chloride days. Also a hint of large values yet remaining for modern methods to realize on.

Tibbet and Lazone have plainly a prince of a field prospector. He had previously located some high grade copper and it was on this development work that he was engaged when he made the new gold find.—Searchlight Bulletin.

STEALS RATTLER IN A SUIT CASE

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 23.—The largest live rattlesnake ever seen in this city was brought in this evening by two Imperial Valley men, who hoped to get a good price from a museum or taxidermist. They had him in a large suit case, which they handled so gently that a sneak thief's attention was attracted, and when opportunity offered, he made away with it from a car.

"We have been robbed, and we want the dead wagon sent for the thief," the owners reported to the police. "That snake was a bad one, and if the suit case was carelessly opened, the man who took him is a gonner."

It is believed one man in Los Angeles had the surprise of his life tonight.

MUTINY AMONG CHINESE SOLDIERS

(By Associated Press.) VLADIVOSTOK, Dec. 23.—News of a mutiny which occurred a fortnight ago was received here today. A detachment of Chinese soldiers, it was stated, murdered their officers and looted Chinese-Russian caravans on their way. A force of 500 cavalrymen, together with artillery, was sent in pursuit, and yesterday met the mutineers, who numbered 900 men. They engaged them near Morgehen. The result of the encounter is unknown.

ARGENTOS JURY DISAGREES. Argentos, the Greek, who was charged with killing a waiter of Goldfield near the Steiner ranch, has had his trial in Independence, and news has reached here that the jury disagreed, seven having been for conviction and five for acquittal. He is the man who threatened the life of Ray Baker, and if he should escape the law in California, he will be brought back here to go to jail for his threats against Baker.

SHOSHONE MILL RUNNING NICELY

The Montgomery Shoshone mill has been running steadily this week, with the exception of a few hours when the power was shut off on account of the break in the line above Palmetto. The new screens are working nicely. Manager Turner announces that three shifts will be employed in the mill about the first of January, which means that the mill will be brought up to capacity, or nearly so. One car of concentrates and two cars of ore were shipped this week to Salt Lake. The triple compartment shaft has reached the 600-foot point, and a station is now being cut.—Rhyolite Herald.
